The members of the Staff Learning Community came up with the following in response to the assigned task:

Engage in open-ended brainstorming about recommendations and possible strategies for enhancing educational experiences based on both internal analysis and external research leading to a list of five strategies, and then decide upon the predominant one.

1. We recommend that all members of our community – students, faculty and staff – adopt a Woodbury email address as the main means of university communication and check it regularly to promote an efficient and effective flow of information and a better sense of community.

2. We recommend that there be more dedicated community space for Woodbury student activities both indoor and outdoor.

3. We recommend a developmental adjunct faculty program to inform them, to incorporate them into the community and create a sense of awareness as to their responsibility to our Woodbury students.

4. We recommend that if indeed studio culture is an integral part of the Woodbury identity, then we seriously consider what types of services are needed to support such a culture and what times these services need to keep.

5. We recommend that Woodbury offer more Professional Development courses to assist the Woodbury community with making those connections necessary for a further integration of the curricular and co-curricular nature of university life.
