M.A, Organizational Leadership

LEARNING OUTCOMES

• MOL students are skilled, innovative, principled, and ethical leaders who understand the foundations of organizational leadership and build on those to contribute to the effective functioning of society at all levels.

• MOL students demonstrate an understanding that leadership is not solely a matter of formal authority or power but rather is a matter of influence, integrity, spirit, and respect regardless of one's power or authority.

• MOL students demonstrate proficiency in inquiry, creative problem solving, and examining values in decision-making.

• MOL students communicate skillfully in multiple forms of expression, such as logical, statistical, and visual. All students have proficiency in written and oral communication, demonstrating particularly expertise in styles and conventions of organizations and business. They will demonstrate skill in professional presentation.

• MOL students will engage and participate with others actively and responsibly. MOL students are prepared to continue to fulfill civic and professional responsibilities through reasoned and open participation. They relate themselves and their culture to diverse cultures within the U.S. and the world.
